Sessions for Oct. 14, 2019

OSMA Region 5 Conference

These sessions are for those who want to spend two hours in the morning and one in the afternoon, really digging into a topic. They'll get hands-on time and come away with something solid to bring back to their staffs. (2 students per session per staff, please, until all schools have had a chance to register.)

1. Create your playbook for sports coverage: This comprehensive class will discuss strategies that will allow editors and reporters to evaluate their sections and build toward a professional, cutting-edge coverage and writing plan. The hands-on class will cover a variety of reporting strategies -- including event-oriented online coverage, issue-oriented indepth planning, and finally solid opinion use. Dean Hume

2. Featuring the Feature: If you're a fairly new reporter and writer, find out how you can make what you produce sound more like a feature and less like an English class paper. Learn -- and practice -- the way to interview sources and organize information your audience will want to read. Leave with a good start on a story for your next publication. (Bring a laptop if possible) Maggie Cogar

3. InDesign from A to Z... or at least D: Beginning with an introduction to the InDesign© environment, we will work to complete layouts and expose you to many of the tools in this program. Text wrap, drop shadows, gradients and text-on-a-path are just a few of the integrated tools in InDesign©. Learn how to use the program that the pros use! Hands-on practice especially for beginners in newspaper OR yearbook. Amanda Leahy

4. Digital Photo 101: Bring your digital camera and have enough time in this session to really make some progress with your photography skills. Whether it's really understanding what all the options are on your camera or finding the tips and tricks to make a so-so shot better, this is the place to hone your photo skills. Wayne Dunn

Adviser: Additional students interested in these sessions if there is room? Please check here.
